Junior Advisor & Resident Coordinator [illegible]

Once again, the Resident Coordinators and the Junior Advisors faced-off in the annual JA / RC Olympics. The 1993-1994 Games consisted of the following four major events: the life-saver pass between the lips, the truck push, the canoe race on the Puddle, and the changing of shorts in a sleeping bag. Obviously, these events were made to be as equally fun for the participants as well as for the spectators — especially the sleeping bag event!

These multiple events not only tested the mental and physical strength of all the participants, but also their capacity to laugh. For example, during the truck push, the Resident Coordinators actually had two false starts. The first was caused because the driver of the truck was unable to turn the steering wheel because it accidentally locked.

By the end of the day, however, the laughs were on the Resident Coordinators. The J.A.'s dominated the majority of all the heats in most every event. This outcome reversed the winning streak that the Resident Coordinators had maintained for the last couple years. In sum, the 1993-1994 JA / RC Olympics proved to be a humorous and exciting afternoon.

Clambake

Although the semi-annual Clambake, sponsored by the Bates Outing Club, did not take place on a picture-perfect day with blue skies and sunshine, the Bates community still managed to make the best of this tradition.

The Clambake took place at Popham Beach in Reid State Park. One might say that it was a typical overcast and chilly "Maine" day at the beach. The weather demanded a few layers of warm clothing, yet this did not interfere with the day's activities, which included the games of volleyball and frisbee. Of course, the day would not be complete unless a few daring souls tested the frigid waters, although a few cheated by wearing wetsuits.

The highlight of the event was definately the fine cuisine, which included steamed lobsters and clams, along with corn-on-the-cob and veggie burgers. A seafood-lover's dream came true late in the afternoon when the remaining lobsters were "given" away for a mere two dollars.

Although the actual turnout was slim due to the weather, no one left with an empty stomach!

Halloween Festivities 1993

The evening of October 30 was one of the best parties of the semester. The Annual CHC event featured not only many creative costumes, but also good music and video screens on the dance floor, showing yet again that no, we can't dance.

Awards were given for the best costumes, including a group dressed as Screaming Trees, Beer Cans, and Fashion Police who issued fashion citations to truly frightening costumes, the most noteworthy of which was to Dean Bragonier for dressing like a tramp.

The event was preceded by the Tuck and Patti a capella group, which also featured the Deansmen, the Merimanders and a slide show of the Bates campus by Mr. Gene Clou[illegible] Many parents and Alumni attended the event which marked the begining of Bates $5[illegible] lion Capital Campaign.

After [illegible] and slide show, the real fun [illegible] first snow of the year fell, [illegible] campus enjoyed one of best attended and exciting parties of the year.

Clean dorm rooms, (relatively) tame parties, and catered lunch in Merrill? It must be the annual. . .

(Impress the) Parents Weekend

The Quad's grass was freshly mowed. Dorm rooms were void of empties and other undesireables. Athletic teams enjoyed the hundreds of spectators that rooted and cheered. Even the President's lawn was covered with a bright yellow canopie, underneath which lay an assortment of fruits and cheeses. Just another normal weekend at Bates? Not quite - faculty, staff, and students rolled out their Sunday best for the annual parents weekend.

Pleasant weather complemented the scores of planned activities, ranging from a dozen sporting events to nightly showings of "Sleepless in Seattle." In addition, the arts department provided a number of performances and exhibits for visiting families to absorb. Various other clubs held tours or seminars to show what they are made of.

This year's weekend was special, as it included the dedication and official opening of the new residential complexes. The Moodies were on hand to oversee the dedication of their $1,000,000 to the college.

Many students looked forward to seeing their families, and took advantage of the opportunity to restock the fridge and update the wardrobe with the latest in Bean, courtesey ma and pa's Visa.

Some students went home to see their families, while the other "orphans" visited friends at nearby schools, or stuck around campus to enjoy the scene.

All in all, the weekend won a favorable review from most.

Fall . . .

Convocation bar-b-que . . . the last chance to wear shorts or a sundress and still get away with it. You're smiling at returning friends, frowning at your standard-issue Bates burger, and you start to settle back into the familiarity that is Bates — or maybe you are forging a new familiarity. Within weeks you will be kicking through fallen leaves, organizing intramurals, researching your thesis, or driving to Freeport. The school year has begun.

As You Like It

......By William Shakespeare......

"As You Like It," by William Shakespeare, was performed by the Bates College Theater Department in Shaeffer Theater between November fifth and thirteenth. With the directing help of Martin Andrucki, and a large production crew, the actors performed the piece skillfully and with much vibrance.

With Steven Young and Kristen Baker in the leading roles of Orlando and Rosalind, and with the addition of the numerous other supporting actors, this Shakespearian tale came to life.

In addition to the great acting, there were also enjoyable music numbers composed by Bill Matthews. Finally, there was a dance choreographed by Marcy Plavin. The production was performed excellently, as always.

Winter . . .

The tree outside Commons still hasn't lost its leaves. Your nose hairs freeze as you leave your classes. And your ice wipe-out average is steadily climbing . . . Winter is quintessentially Bates; the season we love to hate. But how else would you scream down Mount David on a cafeteria tray? Or avenge your last snowball fight by tossing your adversary in a 20 foot mountain of snow? If we can survive 4 winters in Maine, we can survive anything.

1994 SUPERBOWL: The Dallas Cowboys won their second straight National Football League championship and the Buffalo Bills earned a sadder spot in sports history by losing their fourth straight Super Bowl. Dallas defeated the Bills 30-13, scoring 24 unanswered points in the second half after trailing 13-6 at halftime.

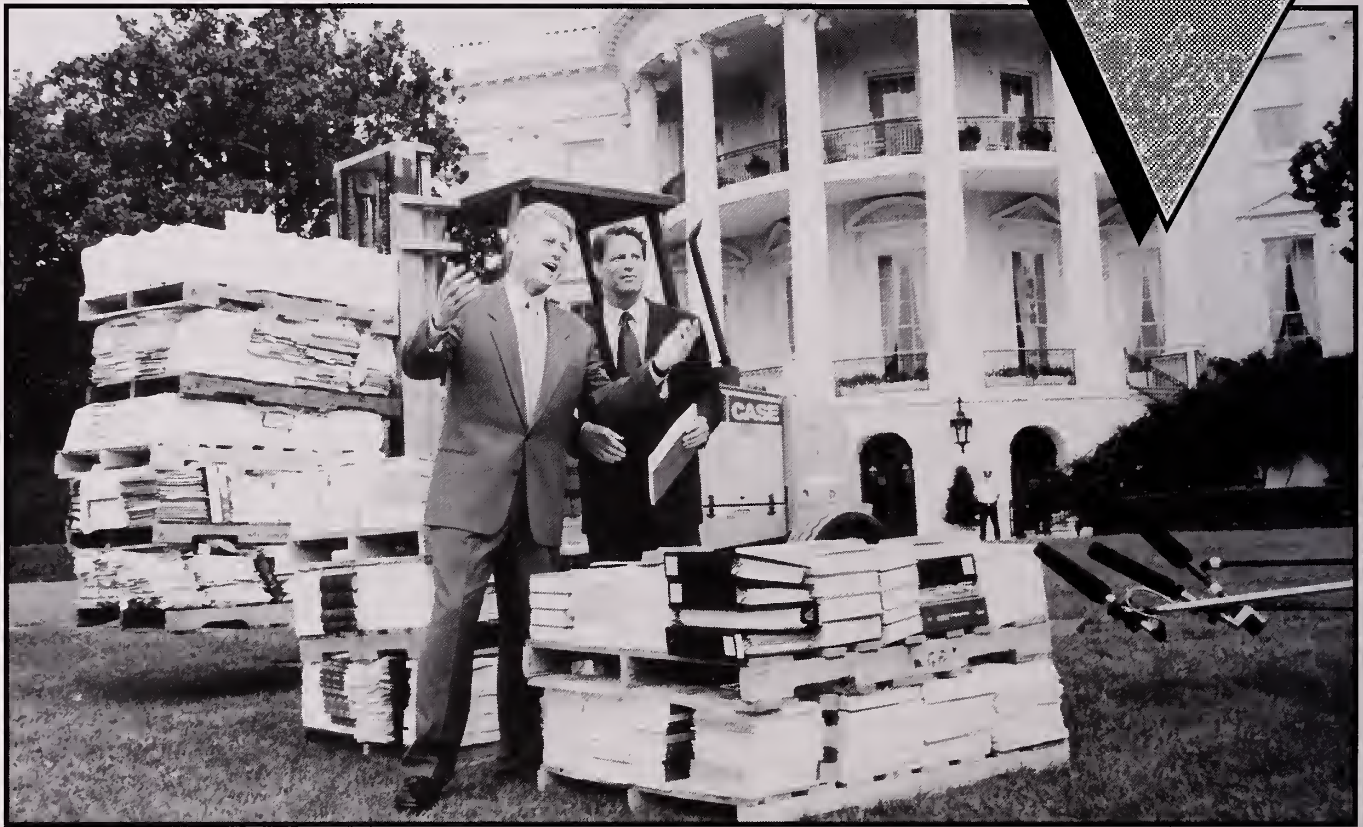
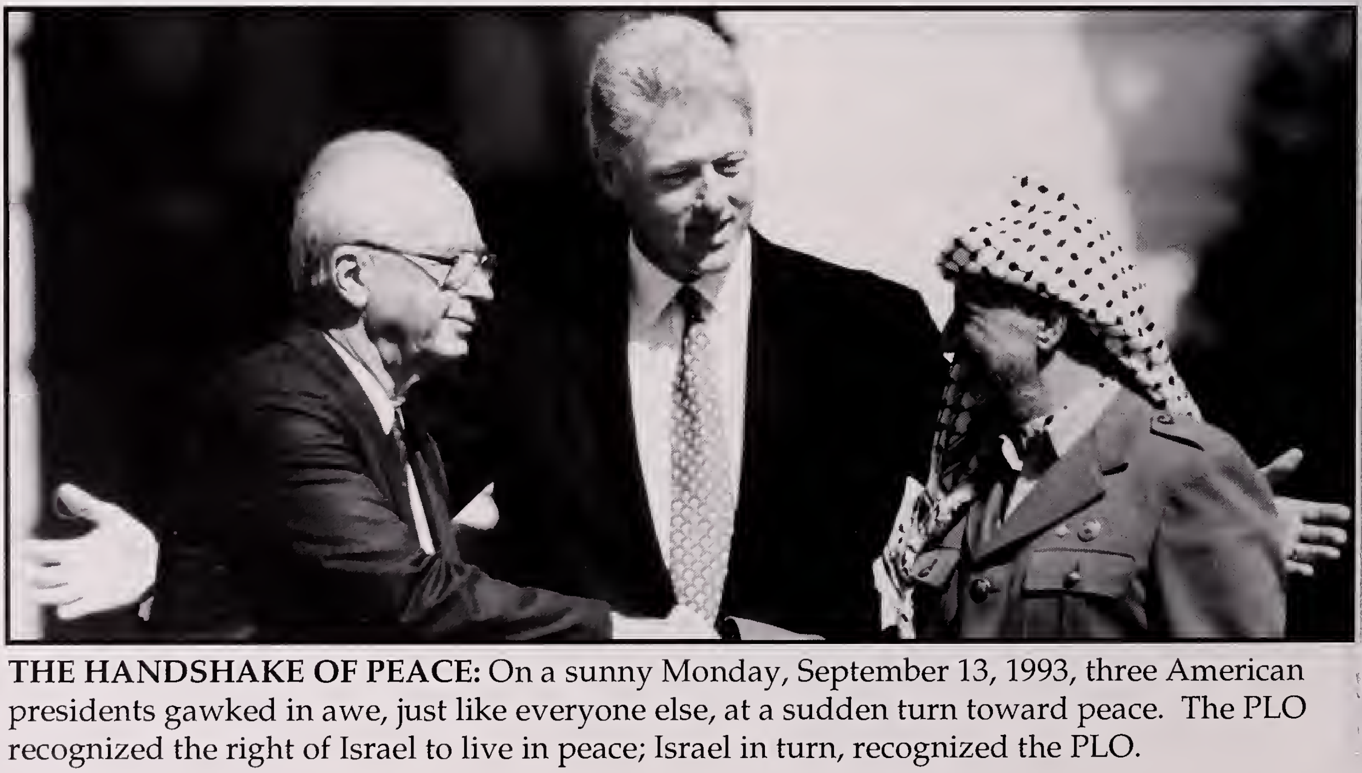
This Year In Politics



REINVENTING GOVERNMENT: Flanked by forklifts carrying reams of government rules and regulations, President Clinton and Vice President Gore outlined plans to cut, consolidate and reshape the federal bureaucracy.



THE HANDSHAKE OF PEACE: On a sunny Monday, September 13, 1993, three American presidents gawked in awe, just like everyone else, at a sudden turn toward peace. The PLO recognized the right of Israel to live in peace; Israel in turn, recognized the PLO.

SUPREME COURT JUDGE RUTH BADER GINSBERG: Declaring that "the times are changing," Ruth Bader Ginsberg in 1993 became the second woman to sit on the United States Supreme Court.

HEALTH CARE REFORM: President Clinton's point man on health care reform in 1993 was his wife, First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. When Mrs. Clinton appeared before Congress to implore its members to work with the administration to overhaul the health care system, she got a movie star's reception. But the talk quickly turned to business.

This Year's Disasters & Obituaries

MIDWEST FLOODS: It was the biggest, wettest story of the summer. The floods that washed across the Midwest may have been the worst in American history, and they captured the concern of people across the nation. The stage for disaster was set during the winter, when unusually heavy snow fell. And then the rains came.

Spring . . .

To most of the continental United States, spring starts in April, even March. At Bates, however, it's more like May 10th. That's when Short Term bar-b-ques aren't called off on account of snow, when you can resurrect your jean shorts . . . even blast a little music outside your dorm. It's finally spring at Bates. The perfect end, perhaps, to one year of college down . . . only 0,1,2 or 3 more to go.

Welcome!

SENIOR SECTION 1994

Senior Year is perhaps the most memorable and eventful year that each of us spends at College. It means the ending of our college careers, but also the beginning of "real life." The year is a compilation of job interviews, thesis, Cage, Goose, non-paid movies at Hoyt's, Bar-B-Ques, booze cruises, Pub Crawls, tests, papers and apartment searches.

Over the past four years we have watched and benefitted from all the various changes that this school has seen. When we entered we had a new president, Smith was all Freshmen, (and that's what we were called), there were two more houses on Wood Street, two less parking lots, admissions wasn't overrun with us and the New Dorms were but a mere gleam in President Harward's eye. As we exit center stage, there are three new buildings, 150 more "first-years", still no place to park, a new and improved alcohol policy and we are all four years older and wiser. These years have taught us much and these times have been ones that we will take with us for the rest of our lives.

Although the future is scary for some and exciting for others, in retrospect our experiences here will see us all into a positive, bright and happy future. So we say goodbye to Commons, dorms, the Goose, the Cage, limited parking, eight feet of snow, tests, papes and thesis. But we also leave behind the many people who have given their time and energy to help us be the people we have become over the past four years. We will look back with fond memories and have aspects of this place with us always.

A seasoned, travelled, motley crew returned to Bates this fall. Sophisticates, at twenty-two, we thought we knew it all.

But there was one vast ocean which we still had left to swim -- the dreaded senior thesis -- a probation mighty grim.

Now, from the lab at Pettigrew arose a muffled roar. It thundered like a tempest from Bar Harbor's rocky shore.

"Burn it! Burn the thesis!" shouted one poor senior soul. And it's likely she'd have done it, had not honors been her goal.

Through the dark procrastination, our advisors' passion shone. With sadistic jubilation, they insisted we write on.

As we gallop toward our future, we will sadly leave our past. But the sun is out in Batesville. We shall graduate, at last.

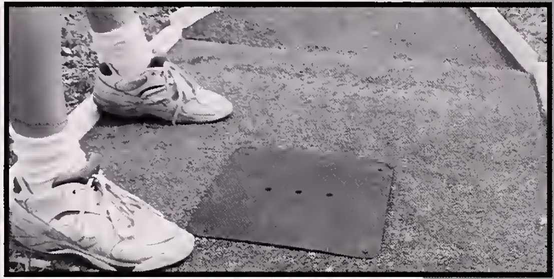
Carnival on the Quad

STAC, the short-term activities committee, sponsered the first annual carnival on the quad, an event that included many activites and prizes. With tickets only costing a quarter, participants played putt-putt golf, spun on the Orbitron, threw rings at ducks and darts at balloons, as well as bouncing on the moonwalk, everybody's childhood favorite. There was even a gypsy telling fortunes. A bar-b-que with the traditional hot dogs, burgers and veggie burgers topped off the carnival's fun activites. All who were there had a great time.



Clam Bake

The short term clam bake was just as festive as its fall counterpart. This semi-annual event sponsored by the Bates Outing Club is a college favorite. Students enjoyed the day at State Park by relaxing on the beach, playing frisbee and kyacking. Of course, nothing beat eating the fabulous meal of lobster, clams, corn on the cob, hot dogs and hamburgers.

Graduation 1•9•9•4

Good evening. Tonight I stand in awe of this extraordinary opportunity to speak with you — the people who have so profoundly shaped the last four years of my life. Yes, your creations of art and beauty, your calls to action, your failures to act, your painful disagreements, your miraculous compromises, your reactions to injustice and pain, and the wisdom, laughter, and diversity of opinion which you have let fall everywhere in between have deeply and differently effected the very shape and meaning of this community for all of us. I wish to impress upon all of you here — fellow students, faculty, staff, and administrators that your experience of this community is not just part of an individual effort and achievement, but part of an extraordinary collaboration. Within this realization there resides an acknowledgement of individual and community responsibility which celebrates true conviction, regrets apathy, and crumbles beneath hatred and injustice.

In considering what I wanted to say tonight, I concluded that there was little that I had to say, but much that I wanted all of us to think about and talk about as we reflected upon the products of this four year collaborative effort for which we are all responsible. I let the word education roll around in my mind as I considered how we might think about why we all chose to be here — nestled amongst books, labs, classrooms... and what the achievement of a diploma — a bachelor's degree might actually mean. Are we educated? What does it mean to educate us? What have we learned? What haven't we learned? In thinking about these questions, I offer a story of a boy and his uncle and their battle with education and educating. The story is entitled "Playing War" and was written by the German author Gudrun Pausewang. I have shortened and translated the story.

The young boy in the story, Florian, asks his Uncle, Bernhard, to play war with him. Uncle Bernhard had lost an arm in the last war and while the rest of the family sits around the television Uncle Bernhard questions his nephew about the attraction and niceties of playing war. Like most plastic gun toting children of today, Florian explains that war is not boring, you get to shoot people, run over everything with tanks, throw hand grenades, jump out of planes, become a hero, and eventually win. Uncle Bernhard is skeptical of this vision of war, but the two go on to agree on the rules of their war games. They will play until one of them gives up and this person will subsequently be the loser.

The first thing which Uncle Bernhard does is to push Florian into a ditch filled with dirty rain water in order that they might both escape enemy gun fire. Florian finds himself crouching in the ditch of dirty rain water, wetness creeping up his Sunday pants, chin submerged, and uncle screaming "get down!" Florian mourns his Sunday pants and cries to his Uncle to stop because he fears the wrath of his mother. But his uncle simply pronounces Florian an orphan by virtue of a large bomb which has just killed his whole family leaving him utterly alone. Uncle Bernhard soon emerges from the brown rain water and becomes Florian's enemy. He shoots Florian point blank with his twig gun, but Florian refuses to die. He screams that he does not want to be the loser and begins to beat on his uncle's chest. Uncle Bernhard takes Florian by the back of the neck and throws him into a bush of stinging nettles. Florian's face and hands burn as he calls to his uncle for help, but his uncle only asks him if he wants to play real war or not.

Florian pulls himself out of the bush and runs into the forest with his uncle, his enemy, close behind him. When Florian looks behind him he sees not his uncle, but someone who looks more like a beast with eyes rolling madly and mouth twisted in fear and hate. Florian soon loses both of his boots in the thick mud and he screams out in pain as he stumbles over sharp sticks and rocks which tear open the bottom of his feet. He hears the heavy breathing of his uncle behind him but keeps running until confused with fear and pain he stumbles into a thorny bush which cuts his Sunday pants and legs into brown and red ribbons. His face and hands bleed and his heart pounds into his throat. There is silence despite his frantic heart and he notices that his uncle is no longer behind him.

Uncle Bernhard lays face down with his one arm tangled in a bush. It is at this moment that Florian has the type of realization which should emerge from education. He begs his uncle into life and give up his game of war. Florian has experienced only twelve minutes of this pure education and in those twelve minutes Florian learned of the pain, fear, and humiliation of war. I wish to suggest that perhaps an education is much like playing war. We grapple with those important and vital questions of human existence with the luxury and benefit of the painful and joyful guidance and insights of our Uncle Florian's — teachers, friends, strangers... who all contribute to this great collaborative experience of educating and being educated by speaking and offering their experiences and the experiences of history. I hope that we all can think about where and how our thinking has deepened, changed, and become richer in the past four years because of the generous offerings of someone in our own community. Think about how we have all collaborated to educate one another.

The world has certainly collaborated in the past four years to educate us. We have all witnessed free elections in South Africa, a peace treaty between Palestine and Israel, the opening of Eastern Europe, a war in the Middle East, a ground breaking decision by the Supreme Court concerning sexual harassment, the further claim of a virus on more and more of our brothers' and sisters' lives, a bitter battle over equal rights for gays and lesbians, an African American woman's acceptance of the Nobel prize for literature, the election of the first Democratic U.S. President in twelve years, and so many other happenings which alter our vision of the future. We have a lot to change and to rejoice about, but we have nothing to be desperate or hopeless about. Audre Lorde, a poet and activist, who died lat year of breast cancer wrote this about forging a future without desperation, hatred, or hopelessness and about being educated — possessing knowledge:

"Anger, like guilt, is an incomplete form of human knowledge. More useful than hatred, but still limited. Anger is useful to help clarify our differences, but in the long run, strength that is bred by anger alone is a blind force which cannot create the future. It can only demolish the past. Such strength does not focus upon what lies ahead, but upon what lies behind, upon what created it — hatred. And hatred is a death wish for the hated, not a life wish for anything else."

There have been moments here where I have felt anger, even hatred. I cannot say that I have ever created anything out of either state of knowledge, but I have destroyed things — some of which deserved to be destroyed and many of which deserved understanding and discussion. I hope that we can consider our graduation not as a send off into a harsh, and hopeless world where hate and anger rule, but as the continuation of a collaborative effort to build — to create a world which looks a lot more like our ideal. Like Florian, we have spent quite some time playing war in order to arrive at a vision of such a world. Yet, our own community has failed to live up to that vision — that ideal.

I feel a collective weariness blanket this community whenever we begin to attempt to start a dialog about the diversity of experience on this campus. I believe that that weariness emerges out of fear, misunderstanding, and/or frustration. Yet, there resides a harsh reality on this campus. There are students here who face the unjust burden of racism, sexism, homophobia, or a layering of all three. I know that there are people here tonight who are tired of hearing these words and perhaps feel anger and confusion concerning the sit-in at admissions, the pain reflected in the pages of the Student, and the teach-in last week. I know that there are people here tonight who are tired of being tired, of educating, of organizing discussion only to hear silence or a refusal to admit responsibility or even the existence of a problem. I know there are people here tonight who are working to overcome their own fears and prejudices, but feel guilt and anger out of which nothing can be created.

My own frustration level reached its peak last week and I cannot even begin to imagine how some of you don't have the luxury of even being momentarily frustrated must have felt when you read that the teach-in was part of a plot involving political tyranny. There is no plot. This is about understanding that there are people on this campus who are in pain. We all have some conception of what it is to be happy and I have burdens on my own happiness which I largely control, but there are burdens which people suffer on this campus which hinder the pursuit of an education and happiness and which they cannot control but look to the community to take responsibility for and lift because they cannot. I think we can all understand that and as a community it seems that we are not only responsible, but emotionally vested in making sure that those burdens are lifted. We can no longer stand up at forums and say that we judge people on an individual level whether they are red, green, black, or yellow because if this were true we wouldn't be there. We all have something which we need to work on and when we consider it our responsibility not to feel guilt but to forge happiness and lift burdens we are creating something. Through collaboration we are taking responsibility and creating joy.

I hope we can all turn to each other over the next few days and begin to acknowledge the source of that weariness and begin to understand how we can leave Bates changed, at peace and hopeful because of that acknowledgement. We have achieved something truly exceptional in our four years here and there is much which we have to do, but that doing and understanding are and should be the collaborative products of our "playing war." I wish you all peace and joy. Good night and thank you. (Delivered by Venessa M. Flaherty '94)

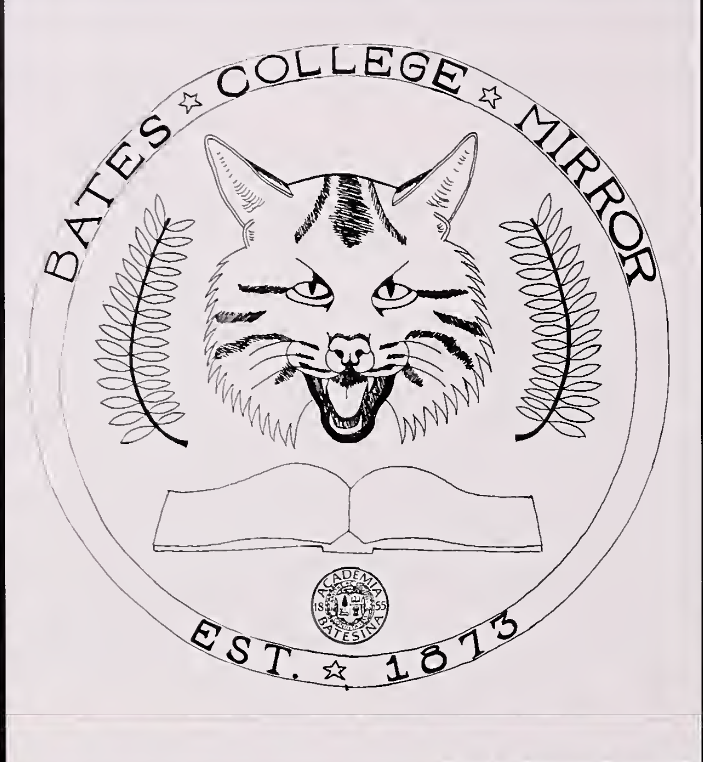
The 1994 Mirror



Crest by Deborah Bernat '97

Well, for the last time, our fourth time as editors, the Bates College Mirror has once again gone to print at the end of May. As usual, we never thought we would be able to finish this monumental task that is the Bates yearbook. This year we were finally able to create OUR yearbook, but we also had many other commitments this year (i.e., Thesis). However, with the help of one of the most energetic and talented staff we have had in the past four years, we were able to create a book that we hope the Class of 1994 can be proud of.

As in past years, the yearbook adopted a theme for the 1994 book. This year's theme was "Traveling On." This theme seemed appropriate since we as a class would be soon taking our places in the world outside of Bates. However, in order to move on, it is important to study where we have been. This yearbook will serve as a reminder of where we have been for the past four years.

This year, we as a yearbook staff have also tried to include more of the Bates Community in the book. As you flip through the 240 pages of this book, take note of the Commons Staff photograph and that of the Maintenance Department. We also tried to capture as many of the members of the Class of 1994 as possible so keep a lookout for your friends.

Both Anne and I thank our wonderful staff for the last time. We also wish every member of our class the best for the future. Finally, we present to you the 1994 Mirror. Happy reading! - Anne & Mark

Mind & Body

For over fifty years we've invested in the health of both. Excellence in education is the key to Maine's future. That's one reason we promote initiatives such as the Maine Youth Apprenticeship Program and teacher-business sabbatical programs. We appreciate and applaud Bates College's role in our education system. Best wishes for your continued success.
